

Methodological Note on Table 7.2 of the Small Arms Survey 2009

This document presents the steps followed in selecting countries and areas for inclusion in Table 7.2 (Selected post-conflict countries: 1990–2008) of the Small Arms Survey 2009.

This methodology was applied to:

- select post-conflict countries and areas; and
- identify what brought an end to the conflict ('outcome') and when the post-conflict period started.

Sources

In order to minimize the exclusion of post-conflict cases and the erroneous inclusion of cases not experiencing a post-conflict period, a combination of sources was used. These comprised conflict databases as well as media reports and research documents from academic, non-governmental, and other institutions (see Annex).

Step 1: selection of post-conflict cases

Table 7.2 lists only countries and areas that were affected by armed conflict at any time since 1990 and that were not experiencing armed conflict at the end of 2008.

Step 2: identification of the conflict outcome and the post-conflict start date

Table 7.2 identifies the development that signalled an end to the latest armed conflict for each post-conflict case. This methodology makes use of UCDP Conflict Termination Dataset definitions and terms, including 'peace agreement', 'ceasefire agreement with conflict regulation', 'ceasefire agreement', 'victory', and 'no or low activity'. In the case of the former Yugoslavia, the term 'intervention' was used. The table also lists the year of the end of hostilities.
